Maths

The children have been hard at work on multiplication this week. They started off by revising the grid method, so they had a solid understanding before they moved onto column multiplication. They have been doing well with this and most children have been able to use this method to multiply 2 digit by 2 digit numbers.

HOMEWORK

Children will be bringing homework they have yet to finish in class. This week the children will be bringing home a multiplication grid to fill in. They could time themselves to see how long they take to complete the task.

Literacy

The majority of children have almost finished writing up their raps. This has been a real team effort with children working together to create 6 verses, one for each wife. The results are fantastic! Later in the week the children have been understanding how to take on board and evaluate different points of view. We looked at the situation between the Pope, Henry VIII and Catherine of Aragon to help us do this.
