

Charlottesville Snow Team Route Clearance 2012

The map shows the walking routes that the Charlottesville Snow Team aim to clear as soon after a snow event as possible. Depending on how much snow falls we may well tackle other routes as well.

The red triangles are areas that have been identified as being of high risk and where an accident has or has nearly taken place in the past. The objective is to clear at least 7 metres at the end of these roads in order to give vehicles that are out of control a fair chance of stopping.